

Election Aftercare Info

The Election has come and gone. No one is more surprised at the outcome than me. This is a break in the momentum of historic proportion. Did we not see it because we didn't want to? Is it just that close that the future was subject to change?

We can analyze, and I'm sure we will, for days why this result came to be. What is most important to me, spiritually, is that after acceptance has settled in, and healing is underway, we intentionally put our energy back on love and trust. There are two competing thought patterns in America. The "red" thought pattern wanted expression the most in this outcome.

I've been fortunate in my life to have number of things go wrong. Yes I said that was fortunate. Why? Because when things go wrong or you don't get what you want, I have learned how to understand the spiritual implications and use that information to create even more success and joy. The point is that the physical-tangible is just one element of the human experience. We are here to evolve ourselves. That's why we are on the planet. Without challenge, or discomfort we don't grow. We don't evolve. We don't change. I know with 100% certainty that this outcome is for my highest good. I cannot be given an experience I do not need. The divine is not inefficient in this way.

I am on a mission to ferret out the value of this experience. I encourage each and every one of you to do the same. Don't allow the experience to define you and small you down to living a fearful and cynical life. There's always a winner and loser in every contest. The blue people had a good run with a great and articulate leader. The red people get to have their voice heard. The red people are just like the blue. They have families, bills to pay, and goals and dreams. Look for the commonalities, not the differences. Notice difference but don't feed it.

Your goal is to figure out how to deepen your relationship to divine consciousness through this loss. Then, to continue to be a force for love in life. Blue people may not be in the oval office, but you can still effect change in other ways. The most potent change comes when you honor love and trust life. You don't have to be in the white house to do that.

The planet has called out for monumental change. It is here. Find out what your role is in this moment in history. Get on with the business of filling your role. You are not your experience. Experience is for you to become your best self. Nothing more.

I love you. I send you huge energetic hugs.