PARISH OFFICE NOTES: Why are the target groups for the flu shots different? It is understood that the seasonal flu results is more hospitalization and death in the very young and elderly. That is why the seasonal flu vaccine is so important for them. Healthy adults under 50 and healthy children usually can weather a case of seasonal flu. If anyone is at risk for developing complications because of asthma, diabetes or heart disease or any immune suppression, they need to be immunized routinely. The difference with the HINI is that the most vulnerable to complications and hospitalization are pregnant women, children and young adults. They do not know exactly why healthy pregnant women are at such a high risk. The theory for children and young adults in general is that they have not been exposed to this virus before so they have no built in immunity. Senior citizens have been exposed somewhere in the past and so they are not as vulnerable. Stay healthy!! Marybeth Terrell, parish nurse, 301-845-6572.
