PARISH NURSE NOTES: A big transition! Transitioning from high school to college is a big step. Not only does a teen have to decide between work or school but what job or what school. If he/she is moving away from home, talk about personal responsibility, possible homesickness, and expectations for the first year away from home. Discuss the importance of developing friends and joining clubs or sports teams to help adjust to the new environment. Explain how time management, proper sleep, and a healthy diet will help keep stress and anxiety low. For you as parent, know that your teen will come home a different person. He/she will be more independent after a year of making his/her own decisions. Even while you struggle with the change, embrace the difference and his/her first steps to adulthood. Putting that child in God's hands can help lessen the parental fears because you have shown your child the way to behave according to God's plan. Marybeth Terrell 301-845-6572, mbt9507@verizon.net .
